Session Summary

The session began with a debriefing in the Cailleotairi tower at Siorlann, where Voshtai, Elowen Moonshadow, a Firbolg druid of the Dagda Grove, and Aerin Silverleaf of The Eolian Scribes informed the party about the current state of affairs. Voshtai explained that Cailleotairi forces were stretched thin across the Tir due to a decline in Proving recruits and ongoing deployments. He authorized the party to deputize temporary Cailleotairi members as needed, albeit with limited benefits.

The discussion continued with Voshtai recapping the group's previous encounter at Ranger's Rest, where they defeated malleables. Elowen Moonshadow warned of instability in the Anord, the magical chaos of the Tir, which had begun to show signs of unrest. The party was reminded of the riddle on a door found beneath Uldrick, a cannibal cleric dwarf, and Aerin Silverleaf mentioned ongoing research into unlocking that door.

After a week of downtime in Aite-Briethe, the party reconvened in the Market District. They encountered a halfling in despair, which was interrupted by a wood elf named Aoife, who identified counterfeit knots that projected despair. Aoife, a Knot Maiden of the Weave Mothers, requested the party's help in investigating the source of these counterfeits, promising to advocate for them with her organization.

The session concluded with the party agreeing to investigate the Crimson Daggers, a group rumored to be involved with the counterfeit knots, and to explore the River District and sewers for leads. They were set to pursue this new objective as the session ended in The Rain Barrel tavern, where they gathered information from Tekia the Silent about the Crimson Daggers and their operations in the area.

MOMENT

Cailleotairi Authorization and Malleable Threats

In the Cailleotairi tower, Voshtai and Elowen Moonshadow disclose their forces' dire state. The emergence of malleables allows the party to recruit temporary allies, leading to Kroc-gar's jest about a cheeky dwarf and playful banter from Jexim and Sorn. Amid laughter, the gravity of their choices looms, as each decision could influence the escalating conflict against the malleables.

MOMENT

Sorn's Disguise and Defeat in the Ring

In the dimly lit Warg's Manger, Sorn, disguised as an eladrin, enters the ring but reveals his twilight elf form after the first punch. Overwhelmed by a furious goblin opponent, he is left battered. Goblin overseers, intrigued by his audacity, invite him back for more fights. "Always tomorrow," Sorn replies, ready for more chaos.

Kroc-gar's Haunting Memory of Suil Dealrach

Kroc-gar recounts the shadowy Suil Dealrach, casting an eerie glow over Cuan Draoidheach. He remembers Kozok the Broken Gaze, the lizardfolk wizard forever changed after returning from the tower in 1520, transforming it into a harbinger of dread. Weighing the risks, he knows the path leads past the Bone Cairn by the Tiriosann. Will he confront the tower's sinister allure or turn back?

Market District Incident

- The party encountered a halfling attempting suicide near a merchant stall.
- Aoife, a wood elf, intervened and identified counterfeit knots.
- The counterfeit knots were linked to negative emotions and despair.
- Aoife requested the party's help to investigate the source of the counterfeits.

Investigation at The Rain Barrel

- The party arrived at The Rain Barrel tavern to gather information.
- Tekia the Silent informed them about the Crimson Daggers and their possible involvement.
- Tekia requested proof of kills from the Crimson Daggers in exchange for information.
- The party agreed to reconnoitre the River District and sewers for leads.
